The semi-annual journal EAST CENTRAL EUROPE/LEUROPÉ DU CENTRE EST (ECE/ECE) was founded in 1974 by Charles Schlacks, Jr., then at the University of Pittsburgh, together with other journals on the history and culture of Eastern Europe and Russia (the range of which has increased ever since – see the inside back cover). Over the years the editor-in-chief moved to various other American universities and published the journal in cooperation with them. From 1997 to the present the journal has been published independently from Idyllwild, California.

In the early years, the work of the editor-in-chief was assisted by Stanley B. Winters as editor. In 1997 the editorial work was substantially reorganized: it has become regionally divided between the editor-in-chief and the collective actually executing the day-to-day editorial work, respectively. Julia Szalai (Budapest) became editor of the journal; concurrently a prestigious international editorial board of 25 widely known social scientists was set up to assist her work in making attempts for deepening the East-West exchange of thoughts and ideas in and about the East Central European region. Further, a subtitle "Eine wissenschaftliche Zeitschrift" was added to indicate the journal's tri-lingualism.

From 1997 onward, the extended work of ECE/ECE has been financially assisted by the Collegium Budapest/Institute for Advanced Study, the Central European University, Budapest, the Hungarian Ministry of Education, and the Hungarian National Cultural Fund. These and additional supports made it possible to organize a few special events in addition to the regular editorial work. Since 1997 some five workshops were held with the participation of a wider international audience including students; book-launching events took place on certain special issues, and, last but not least, ECE/ECE's first international conference entitled "East Central Europe: from Where to Where?" was organized which took place on 15-17 February, 2001 in Budapest.

On the occasion of publishing the Index of ECE/ECE's first thirty years, the editor-in-chief and the editors express their gratitude to all authors and contributors as well, as to all those institutions whose generous help has made it possible to maintain the publication of the journal so far.
